Stand to Answer to Some Details.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Boise, Idaho, June 18.—The trial of Haywood was resumed this morning and Harry Orchard recalled to the stand and examined for facts which might lead to the impeachment of Richardson.

The impeaching questions propounded by the defense all indicated a purpose by the defense to show at various times that Orchard threatened to kill Stannenberg because of a desire to be revenge for the loss of his interest in the Hercules mine. Orchard denied he had ever made such threats. The state produced a number of letters written by the witness and one by Haywood, the purpose of which was to show there had been a conspiracy to deceive Mrs. Orchard of Cripple Creek as to the whereabouts of Orchard in 1905. The defense vigorously protested against the introduction on a re-direct examination, but the court ruled it was improper to re-open its examination.

SEVEN HUNDRED IRRIGATED FARMS IN HUNTLEY TRACT

First Applications For Homesteads Filed At Billings, Mont., Today—Usual
Methods Of Drawing.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Billings, Mont., June 18.—This was the first day for the filing of applications for homesteads on the Huntley irrigation tract, soon to be opened to settlers, and hundreds of homeseekers were on hand to submit their affidavits. One week is to be allowed in which to file applications and on Wednesday of next week the drawing will begin. On that day the Government officials will draw one thousand envelopes containing the names of applicants, from the total number filed, and the successful drawers will be notified in groups of 150 to make formal entries under the Homestead act for their land, beginning July 22. Each person to whom a homestead is awarded must pay the Government $14 an acre for the land. Of this amount $4 goes to the Indians and the remainder to the Government, to defray the cost of the irrigation canal. The homesteader is to be given ten years in which to pay for the land. The first year he must pay $4.60 an acre, the next three years $3.75 an acre, and for the following six years $3 an acre.

The tract to be thrown open comprises 30,000 acres, to be divided into about 700 farms of 40 to 80 acres each, to be watered by the new canal system. The tract is located twelve miles east of here and was formerly a reservation for the Crow Indians. It is crossed by two great railway systems, the Northern Pacific and Burlington, affording unusual facilities for transporting crops. The government has built a highway parallel to the railroad, affording a direct line to travel up and down the valley. At short distances along the railways the government has laid out townsites, and these are so located that no farm is more than two and a half miles from a shipping point.

The soil of the region is of remarkable fertility and when watered produces bountiful crops. The climate and soil are adapted to all crops of the north temperate zone. Apples and small fruits are raised successfully, also sweet corn, tomatoes and melons. As there is a large range country surrounding this section, live-stock raising is a predominant industry and furnishes a good market for alfalfa and hay. The irrigation works consist of a canal twenty-three and one-half miles long, with branches six and one-half miles in length. The work was completed by the government at an expenditure of more than $2,000,000.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Denver, Colo., June 18.—Pursuant to the call issued two months ago by Governor Butcher, the representatives of fifteen states and territories west of the Mississippi gathered in this city today to discuss the public land question and particularly the land laws adopted by the present federal administration.

The committee instructed with the work of formulating a program includes among its members Senator Perkins of California, Hepburn of Idaho, Carter of Montana, Nixon of Nevada, Fulton of Oregon, Kittredge of South Dakota, Piles of Washington, Clark of Wyoming and Teller of Colorado. This committee has outlined the following questions to be discussed at the conference:

Has the United States the right to hold the public lands in a new state under municipal sovereignty without the consent of the state?

When the new states were admitted did not the government include the right to acquire the public lands?

The withdrawal of public lands have been urged, does such a public necessity exist in fact as would warrant the large withdrawal made?

Has the United States capacity to engage in merchandizing timber and coal in competition with citizens?

Corn and other crops are making rapid strides just now and if the present warm weather holds out the first of July will see them far advanced as usual at that time. Tobacco plants as yet are small and not showing as yet as much as last year.

A week ago chances for this latter crop looked indeed slim. However, there is yet time for a good average yield in this immediate vicinity.

Many repairs were needed to put the hospital in good condition. Carpenters, painters and plumbers have been working; none of their bills are yet paid.

This statement is respectfully submitted to the public who have so generously aided our efforts. We deem it just to show the correct condition of the hospital standing. The hospital is in debt, but much of the money is for furniture and bedding, etc., which will not need replacing for a long time. We hope the good people of Janesville will continue to give us a helping hand until our present debts are paid.

Respectfully,
 SISTERS OF MERCY.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain in the head, pain in the blood pressure—nothing else usually. At last, a sure, safe, and effective remedy. Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—call blood pressure away from pain centers. It is effective, charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods, with women, same cause. If you are restless, nervous, it's blood pressure. Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—call blood pressure away from pain centers. It is effective, charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

Brise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is. Always, it's simply common sense.

Samuel Spencer Wallihan

Dr. Samuel S. Wallihan, a former resident of Rock county, succumbed to pneumonia on the 12th inst. at his home in New York city, in his 73d year. Dr. Wallihan was the second son of Pierce Wallihan, a pioneer resident of Footville, was a graduate of Milton college from which he received the M. A. degree, and served during the civil war as assistant regimental surgeon in the 13th Wis. Inf., in which he enlisted in 1861 with his brothers, Orlando B. and the late Sylvester S. Wallihan. He married a daughter of Edmund Bonis of Evansville and after her death more than 20 years ago was married to Helen M. Withers of Vermont, a cousin of the late S. S. Rockwood. Two sons and four daughters survive him. For over 25 years past he has been a resident of New York, engaged in practicing medicine and the editing of a medical journal, and was the contributor of many able lectures and articles before the state and national medical associations. He was a Freemason and an active member of the G. A. R. It was he who located, last year, the long neglected grave of General Fremont in a New York suburban cemetery and started the move toward the erection of a fitting memorial to that brave veteran. A broad thinker, an untiring worker, great of heart, his constant helpfulness to all about him, lives in the result of acts and words beyond number.

PLANS FOR THE FOURTH FIXED

CHAIRMAN WORTENDYKE CALLS FOR A SPECIAL SESSION.

MEETING ON WEDNESDAY

General Committee, and Chairman of Others Requested to be Present at Seven-Fifteen.

Plans for the Fourth have taken definite shape and Chairman Wortendyke has asked that a special meeting of the general committee and of the chairman of the different sub-committees at the New Gas Light office, Wednesday evening at seven-fifteen. At this time the apportionment of funds available for the celebration will be distributed among the different committees and each chairman is requested to be ready to state how much he will need for actual expenses.

Those Expected.

Those expected to be present are I. F. Wortendyke, George McKee, W. P. Styles, S. B. Hedges, Chas. Putnam, George Simpson, W. H. Cronman, Robert Bostwick, Jr., Charles Bostwick, E. R. Winslow, William G. Wheeler, T. S. Nolan, F. H. Jackson, W. L. Clemons, A. E. Bingham, H. H. Bliss, J. P. Baker, P. J. Mount, Amos Rehner, T. S. McKee, F. S. Sheldon, E. T. Smith, Louis Levy, John L. Snyder, D. W. Watt, Dr. R. W. Edden, and David Atwood.

Features Promised.

Colonel Watt says that he has been promised a goodly number of exhibits for the Nonesuch Parade that will surprise the spectators and visitors to former celebrations. He will call a meeting of all who have signed the papers for the parade and the committee in charge later in the week. Work on the band wagons has begun and promise to be works of art. There are still many wagons and horses needed, and Mr. Watt will be glad to hear from any who will supply this deficiency.

Military Display.

The Spanish American War veterans promise something unique in the way of the military feature of the afternoon parade. Under the direction of Hans G. Jacke, who served in the regular army's crack cavalry squad at West Point, a troop of cavalry, a battery of artillery, a company of infantry and a mountain battery with a regular army transport, hospital corps, Philippines, troops of rough riders, scouts and all the paraphernalia for regular field operation will be seen.

Need Recruits.

The local camp number some thirty odd but Mr. Jacke has recruited a number of outsiders and would be glad to hear from any who will take part in this feature of the parade. He can be found at 154 Chatham street and wants to hear from all who will turn themselves into soldiers for the day at least. A sham battle is talked of and other interesting features including an exhibition of riding as done by the cracks of the United States army.

Other Parades.

The civic parade, in the morning promises to be interesting. Chairman Hedges will not state definitely but it is expected as Mayor he will take pride in the civic display of the city and it is whispered he has promised a fine procession. The automobile parade plans are progressing and will be one of the most unique of its kind ever held.

The Bands.

The five bands will make things lively during the day. In the evening the Imperial and Beloit bands will give concerts, perhaps. Perhaps the Evansville band will also be hired to furnish a third concert but the Lake Mills and Ft. Atkinson boys will have to leave on the evening train. Five big bands, the best in the southern portion of the state will make Janesville musical.

An Enthusiast.

Mr. A. Lowe of Sioux City, Iowa, is spending a few days at his old home. Mr. Lowe left Janesville five years ago and enlisted in the 25th field artillery. He served in the Philippines and was quartered at San Francisco during the earthquake. Six months ago he was married and resigned from the army to engage in the furniture business at Sioux City. He has won a great reputation as a maker of some money. Mr. Lowe will remain over the Fourth and take part in the Nonesuch Bros. parade.

YEARS OF PLENTY AND FAMINE

Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt; and there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten.—Genesis, XLII, 29-30.

In modern Wall street, as well as in ancient Egypt, the memory of man is short, says the Wall Street Journal. One is not to be blamed if seven years of famine wipe out all recollections of seven years of great plenty. But human nature must not be surprised if it finds a case against itself in forgetting so speedily the overflowing abundance of one year because of the late spring in the next one. That seems to be the situation just now, with predictions of a lean year ahead.

The theory of a cycle of years of rural prosperity followed by failure or shortage, is not well sustained by the statistics of production in modern times. In spite of Jevons' masterly exposition, it is doubtful whether the cycle theory of business depression has any basis in agriculture. The records of crop statistics show a tendency to constant production among the older nation and a tendency to increased production among the newer ones.

In the fifteen years between 1893 and 1906 the world's wheat crop increased from 2,500 million bushels to 3,424 million bushels. If lean years be taken as below the first of the period, there was only one such year (1897). The same is true of the rye crop, the other main bread crop. Out of those fifteen years there were only four years in which the crop was below the average. In rye the advance between 1895 and 1904 was from 1,468 million bushels to 1,740 million bushels in 1904, with an average of 1,535 bushels. The lowest crop was 1,305 million bushels.

System of cultivation in the United States have improved much with the extension of area. For that reason crop risks are considerably reduced and shorter periods may safely be taken for comparison. The five latest years of record for the principal crops of wheat, corn, oats and cotton in the United States show, as a rule, but one unusually low year. We have 1904 in wheat and 1903 in corn, oats and cotton to illustrate the exceptional character of the lean year in these crops supplying food and clothing.

ROOSEVELT IN THE SENATE

Dr. Henry Van Dyke says that the senate would be an ideal sphere for President Roosevelt on his retirement from the presidency.

In this statement every American citizen will concur with the exception of the small minority who are so prejudiced that they can see no good in him at all. What a change it would be from Senator Platt to Senator Roosevelt! Would not the power and prestige of the state of New York in the United States senate be increased if it had as one of its representatives an ex-president of the United States?

Theodore Roosevelt will be only fifty-one years old when his term as president expires. If he should enter the senate then he would be two years younger than the late Senator Morgan of Alabama was when he entered the senate in 1877. Yet Senator Morgan lived long enough to enjoy a service of thirty years in that body. Just think of thirty years of Roosevelt in the senate. He would carry into it the most remarkable public experience enjoyed by any American statesman of his age. Roosevelt already has behind him twenty-five years of public life, and yet his intellectual vitality is as strong today as it ever was, nor can it be doubted that he would be as able and strenuous in the senate as he has been in the White House.

The state of New York should not neglect the opportunity to secure such a representative as this in the senate, and it should make Elihu Root his colleague when the proper time came.

The natural beauties that surround Janesville are not half appreciated by the citizens. Strangers may rave over them, but local residents prefer to go to some other beauty spot to remaining at home.

Something doing every minute seems to be an expression that catches public favor. If a stranger visited the new railroad yards they would find was true to the letter.

Hot weather "has come." No; anyone who dares complain should be strung up. After the cold wet days of spring, summer with all the heat is a welcome guest.

Wall street can not get over the fact that there are parts of the country that do not care what happens on that crooked little thoroughfare.

Janesville does something when started. The coming Fourth of July celebration promises to be a winner.

Before the Fourth let everyone clean up their streets and otherwise prepare for a close in spection by visitors.

Ohio has about decided that it is not the pivotal state in the Union after all.

There is still time for much legislation to be finished at Madison.

Taft still continues to win approval everywhere he goes.

Now the telegraphers want to strike.

Wheat is still as good as gold.

SIX CORNERS

Six Corners, June 17.—The flag-raising at the schoolhouse last Friday was witnessed by a large number of people from this and surrounding places. The program was appropriate and interesting and well carried out. Miss McBride, the teacher, had charge of the selections and could not have given the audience better satisfaction. At the conclusion of the exercises the crowd wended their way to the pleasant lawn of Mr. and Mrs. John Zang-zinger, where a picnic dinner and ice-cream and lemonade were served in abundance. To complete the day's pleasure a ball game was indulged in. Much credit is due those who helped to make the day one worthy to be remembered.

Robbie Gray has in his possession a young coon which was captured near the house last Friday evening. Robbie will give him a home as long as he is contented to stay.

Ralph Carter visited Lima friends last Sunday.

The F. B. church at North Johnson-town was well filled last Sunday morning. The recitations and songs by the children were well chosen and finely rendered.

A Possibility.
 "Oh, mamma!" exclaimed little Mary, looking out of the window at her first big snowstorm, "won't the angels be cold after losing all their feathers?"

In leaving the office she said:

"Dr. Richards, you never hurt me in the least in extracting that ulcerated tooth."

FLOOR FELL WITH THREE WORKMEN

BLODGETT MILLING COMPANY'S COOPER SHOP COLLAPSED.

ONE HURLED INTO THE RIVER

John Hefferan Slightly Hurt—Robert Clark and Patrick Smith Were Buried in Debris.

As the result of stringers breaking from the weaknesses of old age, the Blodgett Milling Company's cooper shop on the west bank of Rock river, near Milwaukee street, was partially wrecked at half-past two this afternoon and three workmen had narrow escapes from death. Timbers which supported the second floor of the building first gave way. The floor in half the structure fell, precipitating to the first floor hundreds of finished barrels, material for thousands more, a cooper's stove and the three men—John Hefferan, Robert Clark, the foreman, and Patrick Smith. The east wall was belted out and the lower floor collapsed from the sudden blow dealt by the falling mass. Hefferan was hurled down into the river while Clark and Smith were buried in the debris. After floundering about in water nearly neck deep Hefferan climbed up onto the stream bank. He sustained but a small cut on his cheek and slight bruises. Clark and Smith were pinned down by barrels, staves and hoops and an alarm rung in the west side engine house brought the city firemen who pulled the workmen from their precarious positions. Neither was seriously hurt. The department also dug into the ruins and extinguished the blaze in the stove, thus preventing the conflagration which threatened. Coopers and millers immediately set about cleaning up the wreckage, one corps using a boat to prevent barrels and material from floating away down the river.

The building which collapsed is one of the oldest manufacturing structures in the city. It was originally erected for a furniture factory and was for years occupied by the present Hanson Furniture company's predecessor. The building is entirely frame and at some time in its history was partially fireproofed.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH HOLDS ITS PICNIC

Annual Gathering of the St. Paul's German Lutheran Sunday School.

Some thirty-five people and almost as many older ones assembled up the river this afternoon for the annual picnic of the Sunday School of the St. Paul's German Lutheran church. The tiny boys brigade with their blue uniforms and wooden guns made quite as happy a showing as did the little girls with white dresses and gay ribbons. Games and a picnic lunch were features of the day.

ANOTHER JURY IS UNABLE TO DECIDE?

Alex. Russell Assault and Battery Case. Was Again Submitted by Attorneys at Noon Today.

Before the jury composed of J. Lemke, Samuel Grundy, George A. Griffey, John Wilcox, Philip Sheridan, and J. Oliver Reese of Evansville (the "Apple Tree King"), attorneys Charles Pierce and William Smith for the prosecution and Thomas S. Nolan for the defense made their closing arguments in the Alex. P. Russell assault and battery action, this morning. It was a great forensic battle by all of the contending lawyers and the ridicule and sarcasm and shafts of wit by the defense were turned back with interest by the prosecution in the final appeal of William Smith. The latter, after assuring the jury that Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, and Patrick Henry could have done no better than Mr. Nolan, "embarrassed" as he was by no law or facts and free to have his own wild way and be as original as he pleased," grew eloquent in his defense of the Humane Society which Mr. Nolan had termed a "band of cranks," and in the exposition of the thesis that no man may take it into his own hands to violate or execute the law or to try, convict and punish another in his own cause. He described the blow which felled William Lane as "a scientific, pugilistic upper-cut aimed for the point of the jaw on the angular vein." Judge Rife instructed the jury just before twelve o'clock. After three hours of deliberation, they had reached no verdict and indications pointed to another disagreement.

MAIL CRANE KILLED CORNELIUS MURPHY

Remains of Former Janesville Man Brought Here For Burial—Funeral Tomorrow.

W. A. Murray and Horatio Nelson arrived here this morning with the remains of the late Cornelius Murphy who was killed Saturday at Sand River, a small station near Marquette, Mich. The body is at the home of the deceased's sister, Mrs. W. A. Murray, 104 Linn street, and the funeral will be held from St. Patrick's church at nine o'clock Wednesday morning.

Mr. Murphy was a freight conductor and the accident which cost him his life happened while he was discharging his duties. He was clinging to the grab irons on the side of a box car as his train was pulling out of Sand River and his head struck a mail crane, which had failed to turn back after the fast passenger picked off the mail sack. The crane arm caught Mr. Murphy on the temple, rendering him unconscious and knocked his limp form from the car. He fell onto the rail and both legs were broken off by the wheels. It is thought that death was almost instantaneous.

Miss Mabel Ryan: The remains of the late Miss Mabel Ryan arrived here from Duluth, Minn., this morning and were taken to the home of her aunt, Mrs. William Kober, 113 Lincoln street. Fountains Not Public Baths To the Editor:—Through your columns I wish to call the attention of the proper city officials to the fact that street gamins are using the public drinking fountains for baths. Wishing to water my horse while out driving Sunday I halted at the Five Points basin and my animal refused to drink the water. Some gamins had been playing about puddling their feet in the water and squirting it over the street by partially plugging the spouts with their toes. I am not an enemy of Young America, but do not believe the youth should be allowed to abuse his public privileges.

GAY BELOIT WOMAN IN TOILS FOR SIXTY DAYS

And Her Companion, William Skibitzke, Will Spend 30 Days in the County Jail.

Chief Scholch of Beloit came to Janesville this afternoon with Belle Petke, known as Belle Jenkins at Lake Geneva and Belle Ball in Janesville, a young woman who has been leading an immoral life and who, after being driven from the Lino City to Janesville at four o'clock Saturday afternoon, returned in the evening of the same day. She was committed to the county jail for 60 days and William Skibitzke, her male companion, was given a 30 day sentence.

Use of Rubber Restricted. Probably no substance is adapted to a greater variety of uses than rubber, but its applications are restricted by the limited supply and high cost. Among the purposes for which it has great advantages but is not likely to be extensively employed is that of paving roadways. A rubber pavement laid at a London railway station in 1881 was in 1902 worn down to five-eighths of an inch in its thinnest place. Notwithstanding the scarcity of the material, the cost was less than three times as great as that of wood, and its life has been more than 20 years instead of the four years which the wood or asphalt would have endured.

FIRST VICTIM OF HEAT PROSTRATION

Dr. Charles Sutherland Was Called Last Evening to Attend Aged Man Named Meyer, Near Mt. Zion.

Sheriff I. U. Fisher received a message last evening stating that an aged man named Meyer, in the employ of Henry Sweeney on the Pennell farm just beyond Mt. Zion, was in the throes of delirium, resulting from some strange malady which had suddenly overtaken him and that it required several men to hold him to the floor of the farm-house where he was lying when discovered. Dr. Charles Sutherland and Poor Commissioner S. B. Kenyon drove to the scene and the physician, after making an examination, discovered that the patient was suffering with heat prostration. The man improved rapidly under treatment and was reported to be much better this morning.

Value of Good Intentions. I don't believe very much in good resolutions; for my experience is that the people who make plenty of them are not always as good at carrying them out. You see it takes so much out of one to make a really fine resolution. A solid ounce of good trying is worth more than a whole pound of good intentions.—Woman's Life.

THE PRINCESS VELOPES

By HAROLD MACGRATH

AUTHOR OF "THE MAN OF THE BOY", "HEARTS AND MASKS", ETC.

"Ladies," said I courteously, "I offer you my sincere apologies for this innocent intrusion." I looked at my watch. "I believe that you gave me an hour's respite. So, then, I have 30 minutes to my account."

The women gazed at each other. One laughed, and the other smiled. It was the English girl who laughed this time. "I liked the sound of it better than any I had yet heard."

(Pardon another parenthesis. I hope you haven't begun to think I am the hero of this comedy. Let it be furthest from your thoughts. I am only a passive bystander.)

"I sincerely trust that your hunger is appeased," said the one who had smiled.

I had finished that I turned again, rising. "That is to pay for my horse's supper," I said.

Gretchen's good humor returned. "Whoever you are, sir," her tone no longer repellent, "you are amusing. Pray, tell us whom we have the honor to entertain?"

"I haven't the vaguest idea who my hostess is," I answered.

"It is quite out of the question. You are the intruder."

"Call me Mr. Intruder, then," said I. "It was, you will agree, a novel adventure. I was beginning to enjoy it hugely."

"Who do you suppose this fellow is?" Gretchen asked.

"He says he is an American, and I believe he is. What Americans are in Barscheit?"

"It is, thank you," I absently fumbled in my coat pockets, then guiltily dropped my hands. What a terrible thing habit is!

"You may smoke," said the Boiugereau child who was grown into womanhood. Wasn't that fine of her? And wasn't it rather observant, too? I learned later that she had a brother who was fond of tobacco. To her eyes my movement was a familiar one.

"With your kind permission," said I gratefully, I hadn't had a smoke in four hours.

I owned a single good cigar, the last of my importation. I lighted it and blew forth a snowy billow of heavenly aroma. I know something about human nature, even the feminine side of it. A presentable young man with a roll of aromatic tobacco seldom fails to win the confidence of those about him. With that cloud of smoke the raw edge of formality smoothed down.

"Had you any particular destination?" asked Gretchen.

"None at all. The road took my fancy, and I simply followed it."

"Ah! that is one of the pleasures of riding—to go wherever the inclination bids. I ride."

We were getting on famously.

"Do you take long journeys?" I inquired.

"Often! It is the most exhilarating of sports," said the Enchantment. "The scenery changes; there are so many things that charm and engage your interest; the mountains, the waterfalls, the old ruins. Have you ever whistled to the horses afield and watched them come galloping down to the wall? It is fine. In England—"

"But her mouth closed suddenly. She was talking to a stranger.

I love enthusiasm in a woman. It colors her cheeks and makes her eyes sparkle. I grew a bit bolder.

"I heard a wonderful voice as I approached the castle," said I.

Gretchen shrugged.

"I haven't heard its equal outside Berlin or Paris," I went on.

"Paris?" said Gretchen, laying a neat little trap for me into which my conceit was soon to tumble me. "Paris is a marvelous city."

"There is no city to equal it. Inasmuch as we three shall never meet again, will you not do me the honor to repeat that jewel song from Faust?" My audacity did not impress her in the least.

"You can scarcely expect me to give a supper to a stranger and then sing for him," besides," said Gretchen, a chill again stealing into her tones. "These Americans!" she observed to her companion in French.

I laid aside my cigar, approached the piano, and sat down. I struck a few chords and found the instrument to be in remarkable good order. I played a Chopin "Polonaise," I tinkled Grieg's "Papillon," then I ceased.

"That is to pay for my supper," I explained.

Next I played Le Courrier, and when

"Before I go, may I ask in what manner I might serve as a witness?" Ere the words had fully crossed my lips I recognized that my smartness had caused me to commit an unpardonable blunder for a man who wished to show up well in an adventure of this sort. (But fate had a hand in it, as presently you shall see.)

Gretchen laughed, but the sound was harsh and metallic. She turned to her companion, who was staring at me with startled eyes.

"What did I tell you? You can not tell a gentleman in the candlelight." To me she said: "I thought as much. You have heard Faust in Paris, but you know nothing of the French language. You claimed to be a gentleman, yet you have permitted us to converse in French."

"Was it polite of you to use it?" I asked. "All this, with a wave of the hand, appears mysterious. This is not a residence one would expect to find inhabited—and by two charming women!" I bowed. "Your presence here is even less satisfactorily explained than mine. If I denied the knowledge of French it was because I wasn't sure of my surroundings. It was done in self-defense rather than in the desire to play a trick. And in this language you speak of witnesses, of papers, of the coming of a man you do not trust. It looks very much like a conspiracy."

I gathered up my gloves and riding-crop. I believed that I had extricated myself rather well.

"This is my castle," said Gretchen, gently shaking off the warning hand of her companion. "If I desire to occupy it for a night, who shall gainsay me? I leave the latches down, that is due to the fact that I have no one to fear. Now, sir, you have eaten the bread of my table, and I demand to know who you are. If you do not tell me at once, I shall be forced to confine you here till I am ready to leave."

"Confine me!"—nonplussed. This was more than I had reckoned on.

"Yes," she reached out to strike the gong. (It can not be blamed for surrendering so tamely. I didn't know that the old servitor was the only man around.)

"I am the American consul at Barscheit."

The two women drew together instinctively, as if one desired to protect the other from some unknown calamity. What the device was it all about? All at once Gretchen thrust aside her friend and approached. The table was between us, and she rested her hands upon it. Our glances met, and clashed.

"Did the duke send you here?" she demanded repellently.

"The duke?" I was getting deeper than ever. "The duke?"

"Yes, I am the Princess Hildegarde."

"I had finished that I turned again, rising. "That is to pay for my horse's supper," I said.

Gretchen's good humor returned. "Whoever you are, sir," her tone no longer repellent, "you are amusing. Pray, tell us whom we have the honor to entertain?"

"I haven't the vaguest idea who my hostess is," I answered.

"It is quite out of the question. You are the intruder."

"Call me Mr. Intruder, then," said I. "It was, you will agree, a novel adventure. I was beginning to enjoy it hugely."

"Who do you suppose this fellow is?" Gretchen asked.

"He says he is an American, and I believe he is. What Americans are in Barscheit?"

"I know of none at all. What shall we do to get rid of him?"

All this was carried on with unstudied rudeness. They were women of high and noble quality; and as I was an interloper, I could take no exception to a conversation in a language I had stated I did not understand. If they were rude, I had acted in a manner unbecoming a gentleman. Still, I was somewhat on the defensive. I took out my watch. My hour was up.

"I regret that I must be off," I said ruefully. "It is much pleasanter here than on the road."

"I can not ask you to remain here. You will find the inn a very comfortable place for the night," was Gretchen's suggestion.

"Before I go, may I ask in what manner I might serve as a witness?" Ere the words had fully crossed my lips I recognized that my smartness had caused me to commit an unpardonable blunder for a man who wished to show up well in an adventure of this sort. (But fate had a hand in it, as presently you shall see.)

Gretchen laughed, but the sound was harsh and metallic. She turned to her companion, who was staring at me with startled eyes.

I gathered up my gloves and riding-crop. I believed that I had extricated myself rather well.

"This is my castle," said Gretchen, gently shaking off the warning hand of her companion. "If I desire to occupy it for a night, who shall gainsay me? I leave the latches down, that is due to the fact that I have no one to fear. Now, sir, you have eaten the bread of my table, and I demand to know who you are. If you do not tell me at once, I shall be forced to confine you here till I am ready to leave."

"Confine me!"—nonplussed. This was more than I had reckoned on.

"Yes," she reached out to strike the gong. (It can not be blamed for surrendering so tamely. I didn't know that the old servitor was the only man around.)

"I am the American consul at Barscheit."

The two women drew together instinctively, as if one desired to protect the other from some unknown calamity. What the device was it all about? All at once Gretchen thrust aside her friend and approached. The table was between us, and she rested her hands upon it. Our glances met, and clashed.

"Did the duke send you here?" she demanded repellently.

"The duke?" I was getting deeper than ever. "The duke?"

"Yes, I am the Princess Hildegarde."

"You can scarcely expect me to give a supper to a stranger and then sing for him," besides," said Gretchen, a chill again stealing into her tones. "These Americans!" she observed to her companion in French.

I laid aside my cigar, approached the piano, and sat down. I struck a few chords and found the instrument to be in remarkable good order. I played a Chopin "Polonaise," I tinkled Grieg's "Papillon," then I ceased.

"That is to pay for my supper," I explained.

Next I played Le Courrier, and when

"Before I go, may I ask in what manner I might serve as a witness?" Ere the words had fully crossed my lips I recognized that my smartness had caused me to commit an unpardonable blunder for a man who wished to show up well in an adventure of this sort. (But fate had a hand in it, as presently you shall see.)

Gretchen laughed, but the sound was harsh and metallic. She turned to her companion, who was staring at me with startled eyes.

"What did I tell you? You can not tell a gentleman in the candlelight." To me she said: "I thought as much. You have heard Faust in Paris, but you know nothing of the French language. You claimed to be a gentleman, yet you have permitted us to converse in French."

"Was it polite of you to use it?" I asked. "All this, with a wave of the hand, appears mysterious. This is not a residence one would expect to find inhabited—and by two charming women!" I bowed. "Your presence here is even less satisfactorily explained than mine. If I denied the knowledge of French it was because I wasn't sure of my surroundings. It was done in self-defense rather than in the desire to play a trick. And in this language you speak of witnesses, of papers, of the coming of a man you do not trust. It looks very much like a conspiracy."

I gathered up my gloves and riding-crop. I believed that I had extricated myself rather well.

Woolen Dress Goods, Colored Summer Wash Goods, Women's Ready-to-wear Garments,

Beginning Wednesday, June 19, continuing until July 10th

THREE WEEKS ONLY

TRADE and weather conditions account for this bargain opportunity right in the heart of the season. The cold, backward spring has left our stocks too large for this time of year, and radical—price cutting—value giving of the first water are the best ways we know of to crowd six weeks' business into the next three. Remember nothing is reserved; you have your choice of all our new SPRING and SUMMER DRESS GOODS, all our COLORED SUMMER WASH GOODS, all our WOMEN'S SUITS, COATS and JACKETS at one fifth less than the regular price. Considering the recent advance in the price of all textile fabrics, these reductions are radical indeed. Come early and have first choice while the stocks are at their best. Remember this sale means twenty cents saved on every dollar spent. The more you spend, the more you save.
